

Advocating for individual and community needs

In their work with vulnerable, at-risk and under-served populations, Community Health Workers are keenly aware of the many needs in their communities. CHWs speak up on behalf of their clients and their communities, identifying needs and bringing them to the attention of others, then working together to identify solutions to address those needs.

