

Providing direct services

Within the varied settings where they work, Community Health Workers provide a range of direct services. For many CHWs across the nation and in Virginia, this not only means providing basic health care services, but helping individuals secure food, clothing, transportation, adequate housing, and employment resources.